Give Your Loved Ones the Protection They Deserve

Life insurance is an important part of creating a secure financial future for you and your family. But with AAFMAA, you purchase more than just a policy — you're securing your legacy and providing for your family after you are gone. Final Expense+ protects your survivors from having to pay your final expenses out of pocket when you pass away. Don't leave behind financial challenges for your family members to deal with on their own. Give them the peace of mind that comes from having Final Expense+ to help cover your outstanding debts, medical bills, and costs associated with your funeral.

Your Government and Military Benefits Only Go So Far

You may think your family will get the resources they need from the benefits and entitlements you've earned through your service, but that's not the full picture of what life without you will look like. Here are a few facts your survivors will have to face when you're gone:

- Military benefits and entitlements, including Military Retired Pay, Social Security, and VA Disability benefits stop at your death.
- Survivor Benefit Plans, if elected, can take up to 90 days to establish.
- VA Burial Benefits are only available to Veterans with a rating of 10% or more and are payable at the rate of $300 for a non-service-connected death, up to $2,000 for a service-connected death.
- Bank accounts may be frozen or inaccessible immediately after your passing, and your Social Security death benefit is only $255.
